empest revived and swept over the wild tempest revived and swept over the wild sea in madened rage.

There was no time for talking now. The wind rose so high that words would scarcely have been distinguished. The storm that had gone before had been but play to this awful outburst. The vessel drove on, creaking and groaning, a mere cockle shell on the billows.

"Mother of Mercies!" wailed the captain. "It's all up with us, signores. I can't make out the Cape in this darkness, We shall go on to the rocks. St. Anthony save us!"

The seamen echood his cries.

The seamen echoed his cries.

The two young Englishmen, comprehending their peril, clasped hands in silence.

For the next few minutes it seemed that a Pandemonium reigned.

Then a noise like a report of a cannon suddenly boomed through the storm and the darkness. The little vessel shivered, staggered, and careened upon her side.

She had struck upon a rock.

A moment later crew and passengers were struggling in the waters.

A few moments of buffetings and tossings, of vain struggles and agonized, involuntary prayer, and then Jasper Lowder felt his senses slip from him, and became uncenseious.

When he came to himself, he was lying upon a rocky beach of the Sicilian, sore, bruised, and weak as a child.

He opened his eyes. The wind had spent its fury, and now moaned along the const with a desolate, despairing wail. The waves beat against the rocks.

Lowder struggled to his elbow.

"Wrecked!" he muttered. "I am cast ashore, while the others are drowned! Oh, this is terrible! I have lost my best friend to-night!"

He moaned and wrung his hands.

"He is dead, who would have done so much for me, and I so worthless am saved! All my hopes of an easy and luxurious life must be resigned now!"

At that moment he beheld a dar'k object at a little distance in the water. The waves hurled this object against the projecting head of a sunken rock. At that moment he beheld a dar'k object at a little distance in the water. The waves hurled this object against the projecting head of a sunken rock. At the same instant Lowder recognized it as the body of a man.

He crept toward it, and the waters dashed the body on the shore at his feet. He put his hands on the face. How cold and wet it was! It felt like the same instant Lowder's fingers came in contact with the soft silken moustache, and he knew' that the body was that of Guy Tressilian!

Of the five who had stood on sly.op's ledeck a half-hour carlier, these two alone were left. The captain and he could not be received the friend, but he could not perceive the friend, but he could not perceive the friend, bu glimmering lantly through the times haze, caught his gaze. Raising his voice, he called loudly:

"Help? Ho, there! help!"

The wind had abated, and his cries rang out through the night with startling distinctness. The light he had seen moved and disappeared. A minute later, answering cries reached Lowder's cars, and he heard basty steps, and saw the approaching light of a lantern borne aloft by a man's upraised arm.

"This way!" shouted Lowder. "We are wrecked on the rocks! For the love of Heaven hasten!"

The bearer of the lantern, attended by a male companion, came running to him, and was soon at his side. The lantern bearer was a rough Sicilian disherman, a grade above his class. His companion was also Sicilian, but evidently of somewhat higher degree. Both were all excitement, astonishment and sympathy. In as few words as possible Lowder told the story of the shipwreck, and attention to the condition of his noble young employer.

"I think he is dead!" he said, in a

Jack and Me.

Shine 'm up in a minute,
That is 'n nothin' prevents.
Set your foot right on there, sir.
The mornin's kinder cold—
Sorter rough on a feller
When his coat's gettin' old.
Well, yes—call it coat, sir,
Though' taint much more'n a tear;
Can't get myself another—
Ain't got the stamps to spare.
Make as much as most of 'em—
That's so; but then, yer see,
They've only got one to do for;
There's two on us, Jack and me.

Him? Why—that little feller,
With a double-up sorter back,
Sittin' there on the gratin'
Sunnin' hisself—that's Jack.
Used to be round selling papers,

dave him a reg'lar throw,

Sorter quiet and queer, Him and me go together, He's what they call cashier

High old style for a boot-black, Made all the fellers laugh,
Made all the fellers laugh,
Jack and me had to take it,
But we don't mind no chaff.
Trouble, I guess not much, sir,
Sometimes when biz get's slack,
Idon't know how I'd stand it
I' 'twasn't for little Jack,
Why, boss, you ought to hear him
He says we needn't care

He says we needn't care
How rough luck is down here, sir,
If some day we git up there.
All done now, how's that sir?
Shine like a pair of lamps.
Mornin! give it to Jack, sir,
He looks after the stamps.

Home Manners.

Good home manners, says a writer, are the foundation and the superstructure of good manners everywhere else. The idea that it is of little moment how we behave at home, provided we are courteous an polite in company, is a radically wrom one. Persons often allow themselves to ill-bred at home, thinking that they can put on good manners when they choose, and appear as well abroad as others; but, unconsciously, they are con-tinually betraying themselves. Few things are so subservient on habit as those eve occurring little proprieties, graces, and and amenities of social life which go to make up the well-bred man or woman. expression, tone, carriage, manner and language of years cannot be changer in a day for some special occasion. The requisites of good manners are so multitudinous, it is impossible to give them all; and each, like the snow-flakes which form the avalanche, though important, is so minute in itself, that it is difficult to select any as "most essential." Good manners at home and elsewhere are but the outward manifestations of that love and that spirit "which suffereth long and is kind; which envieth not; vaunteth not itself; is not puffed up; doth not behave itself unseemly; seeketh not its own; is not easily provoked; thinketh no evil; rejoiceth not in imquity; beareth all things; believeth all things; hopeth all things;

The well-bred man and woman express by their manner that they regard the judgment, feelings, tastes, wishes, con-veniences and pleasures of others as high-ly as their own. They strive to avoid all habits which offend the tastes, all expressions which shock the sensibilities or wound the feelings of those about them and all needless violations of the custom and conventionalities of society.

The following particulars will fall under and illustrate the above general principles:

1st. Avoid all expressions which tend to irritate, embarrass, mortify, or pain any member of the family. 2d. Never allude to any fault or failing, unless with the purpose to benefit, and then in private.

3d. Avoid sarcasm, bitter words, "sore" subjects, and reference to any personal deformity. 4th. Do not ridicule, nor hold the opinion of others in contempt. 5th. Give attention when addressed, and do not interrupt nor speak when another is talking. 6th. Never contradict. 7th. Never scold. Sth. Keep your temper. 9th. Never speak in loud or querulous tones, nor order in arbitrary or arrogant manner, child or servant. 10th. Use no slang phrases, nor rude, disrespectful, profane, or inaccurate language. 11th. Never omit the "please" and "thank you," "goo night" and "good morning," nor fail t gratefully acknowledge by some word o These little words oil the harsh machin ery of life wonderfully. 12th. Do not en- THE AMERICAN, ter even your nearest relation's private room without knocking. 13th. Never slam the doors, sit in the windows, hum, whis-tle, or sing in the halls or passage; nor cream to persons out of windows and u stairways. 14th. Teach children to offer precedence to each other and to their su-periors, to avoid awkward positions and ovements, and not to indulge in dis greeable or filthy personal habits, such s yawning, scratching the head, picking ie nose, hawking, spitting on the floor, Sewing Machine Combined ng the nails in company, etc., etc. 15th. Hold the person and personal pos-sessions of another sacred. He who ob-serves this rule will not tickle, nor pinch, nor punch, nor poke his friend or brother; will not, unless he has special permission, open his letters, rummage his drawers, mark his books, finger his clothes, nor OLD NEWSPAPERS .- Many people take ewspapers, but few persons preserve nem. The most interesting reading im-ginable is a file of old newspapers. It brings up the very age, with all its genius and its spirit, more than the most labored description of the historian. Who can take a paper half a century ago without ght that almost every name there is now cut upon a tombstone at the head of an epitaph! The doctor (quack or regular) that advertised his medicines and their cures has followed the sable train f his patients; the merchants, his ships; and the actor, who could make othe preserve newspapers, and they will reay the trouble, for, like wine, their value reases with age.

ise his private property.

No Use.—Some say that it is no use for en to advertise, that they have been in one place of business all their lives, and everybody knows them. Such people seem to forget to take into consideration that country is increasing in population and no matter how old the place may be, there are constant changes taking place; some move to other parts, and strangers fill their places. In this age of the world, unless the name of a business firm is kept constantly before the public, constantly before the public, some new firms may start up, and by liberally advertising, in a very short time take the vertising, in a very short time take the places of the older ones, and the latter rust out, as it were, and be forgotten. No man ever lost money by judicious adver-

How's This?—The effeminate man is weak poultice. He is a cross between weak pointice. He is a cross between root beer and ginger pop, with the cork left out. A fresh water mermaid found in a cow pasture with hands filled with dandelions. He is a teacup full of syllabub; a kitten in pantalettes; a sick monkey with a blonde moustache. He is a vine without any tendrils; a fly drowned in oil; a paper kite in a dead calm. He lives like a butterfly—nobody can tell why. He is as harmless as a cent's worth of spruce gum, and as useless as a shir button without a hold. He is as lazy as; bread pill, and has no more hope than: last year's grasshopper. He goes through life on tiptoes, and dies like cologne water sult over the ground. spilt over the ground.

GARTERS.—A new garter has just co out. It is a heavy, round elastic chain much the style of the heavy gold chain upon which lockets are worn, and has hook and eye to it. OF THE PRAIRIE BELLE. l, no! I can't tell whar he lives,

Because he don't live, you see; Leaatways, he's got out of the habit of livin' like you and me. Whar have you been for the last three year That you haven't heard folks tell How Jimmy Bindso passed in his checks The night of the Prairie Belle.

He weren't no saint—them engineers
Is all pretty much alike—
One wife in Natchez, under-the-hill,
And another one here, in Pike.
A keerless man in his talk was Jim,
And an awkward man in a row—
But he never flunked, and he never lied,
I reckon he never knowed how.

And this was all the religion he had— To treat his engine well: Never be passed on the river; To mind the pilot's bell; And if ever the Prairie Belle took fire-And a thousand times he swore, He'd hold her nozzle agin the bank Till the last soul got ashore.

Till the last soul got ashore.

All boats has their day on the Mississip,
And her day come at last—
The Moyastar was a better boat.
But the Bello she wouldn't be passed,
And so she come tearin' along that night—

The oldest craft on the line, With a nigger squat on her safety valve And her furnace crammed, rosin and

The fire burst out as she cleared the bar.

The tire ourse out as see cleared the bar, And burnt a hole in the night, And quick as a flash she turned, and made For that willer bank on the right. There was running and cursing, but Jim ye Over all the infernal roar, "TII hold her nozzle agin the bank TIII the last galoot's ashore."

Through the hot, black breath of the bur Jim Bludso's voice was heard, And they all had trust in his cussednes And knowed he would keep his word, And, sure's you're born, they all got off Afore the smokestacks fell. And Bludso's ghost went up alone In the smoke of the Prairie Belle.

He weren't no saint—but at Judgment I'd run my chance with Jim, 'Longside of some pious gentlemen That wouldn't shook hands with hin He seen his duty, a dead sure thing— And went for it thar and then;

Miscellaneous Reading.

The Tolling Bell.

It is a custom kept up in many villages of New England to toll the bell at the death of any person in the village, and to indicate the age and sex by the number of strokes. We have rarely seen so dramatic a description of this custom as

An hour later, the bell tolled-slow, sui deep strokes at first, dying out in throb-bing waves of sound; then quicker strokes with pauses after each ten-eight pauses Eighty-four, and a male," said Farmer Brown, as he finished counting the strokes of the bell, and slowly let down the pasture bars-"eighty-four and a the pasture bars—"eighty-four and a male. Old Dr. Morse, no doubt about that—boss, boss, bo-o-ss; co, b-o-ss! Did'nt think he was quite fur along in years. Co, boss, co, bo-o-o-ss; Good old man he was, 'n a Christian, too. Widow Baily, as she stood listening in her cottage door. "He's gone, then, dear old saint! Who'll look after the ton Holes and the Holes and t poor folks now when they're sick, and tend to 'em night and day for nothing', and pray as beautiful as a minister? We never shall hev no sich doctor round here again. But the Lord's will be done! He'll find widders and orphins enough in Hearen that'll be glad to see him, Dr. Morse will, that's clear; and 1 kind o' guess the Lord'll pay the'r bills, accordin'

to what I read in the Scriptur'."
"Eighty-four and a male. It is he then!" sighed Mrs. Deacon Wells, wiping es. "He is at home, at last, and —a blessed change to him, and one little heart.'

At this juncture it was discovered that the person to whom the peculiar properties, valves, brakes, starting apparatus, &c., of the instrument had been confided by the maker, was unexplainable about a three being no half. plainably absent and there being no help for it, a novice at length succeeded in starting the machine, which worked ad mirably through one verse, and from thence leaving the choir to follow on or not as they chose, went on to Old Hun-dred, Coronation, Lanesboro, Dundee,

&c., greatly to the chaggin of the pastor, singers and people.

The clergyman stood the innovation of the new organ upon his services as long as he could endure, and finally ordered "that plaguey box of whistles" removed from the house; which was accordingly done, and the exercises thrally went on in the yard to which it had been inglor ously consigned.

There are machines in many of our modern churches, which are as much an obstacle to sincere Sabbath worship as was "this box of whistles," and fully as vexatious to pastors and flocks; but the clergymen are few who have yet dare to order their removal to the back-var These machines are quartette singing and obdurate choirs, who, not only rob the Christian of his song of praise, but the pastor of his power, and many a soul or its salvation.—Singing People.

A NOVEL PROCEEDING.—In Andove one cold winter day, two boys of seve soon after starting were joined by the small Irish boys. - Highly interested w the operation and the occasional rides ob tained, they did not turn back till they had reached Lawrence bridge. The ecitement over, the cold soon became t much for the three smaller lads, who began to cry about their freezing flugers, which aroused not only the sympathy but the ingenuity of the two elder ones. After much discussion and amended suggestion for making at least the hands of their companions more comfortable: They took one small boy between them and made him put his hands in the pockets. Each then placed a boy on t outside, put their hand next to the their other pockets, and binding u remaining hands with handkerchief toned them into the little fellows' jack the elders with their arms about the The two boys who could prove so equa HOOSAC TUNNEL .- It is now some twenty years since the charter was granted for the road of which this tunnel forms so extensive a part. The cost of this provided the work be finished, as hereto-fore proposed, in 1874. The interest on this immense sum of money at six per cent, is set down at $554,000 for every paratively speaking, but a thousand dol-lars short in the aggregate of $2,000 a d day for every working day in the year. The Mort Cenis Twine is over seven miles long; our Hoosac is less than five. The former, however, had two nations—Italy and France—to build it; ours has but one State, about a twentieth part of one nation to build it. The former was put through by sixty millions of people; the Hoosac will go through by a million and a half of Massachusetts people.

Little Boy Blue. Under the hay-stack, little Boy Blue Sleeps with his head on his arm, While voices of men and voices of maids Are calling him over the farm.

Sheep in the meadows are running wild

Out in the fields where the silken corn

But no loud blast on the shining horn Calls back the straying sheep, And the cows may wander in hay or corn While their keeper lies asleep. His roguish eyes are tightly shut,

Waken him? No. Let down the bars

For year after year we can shear the fleece, And corn can always be sown; But the sleep that visits little Boy Blue Will not come when the years have flown.

Belle Alden's Traveling Bag.

A train bound for St. Louis had just left the depot of Bellefontaine when a gentleman entered the smoking car and laid his hand upon the shoulder of his traveling companion-a tall, handso nan of thirty, who sat musingly blow-ng rings of smoke into the air.

Marcy," said the new comer, " if you want to see at once the sweetest and saddest sight you ever beheld, go into the last car but one on the train. never leave her till I'd make Mrs. Angeliea Townsend out of her."

"That's a speech which I shall faithfully report to Mrs. Agnes Townsend," asid the gentleman addressed as Marcy, rising. "I shall go back and feast my eyes on this beautiful Sister of Charity, and," he added, taking his traveling satchel and shawl from the rack, "as we stopped at the next station, which is due to ten minutea, I may as well take my traps through with me and join you on the table—articles taken from no less are ceptacle than Dick Marcy's traveling bag.

In the upper part of a handsome manison in St. Louis, on the evening of the day our heroine first made the reader's acquaintance afterward."

With meters all combine,
Is what I tried to do. Alas,
My feeble powers do fail,
And here I life my heart in prayer

But sober prose must me content,
For this is here my forte
To simply rell a Saviour's love,
And to my God resort,
But to our church my thoughts ran on,
I thus remained behind
And tried to give my mental powers
The largest scope inclined.
The Church, 'If strange to say took a

THE CITY OF MIDDLESEX.

It is said that there is a feeling in fa-or of the formation of a city on the north ank of the Charles river, composed of he present cities of Cambridge and who has the interests of Middlesex County at heart, should favor it. Boston is reaching out for more territory, and her desire for more land would cause her to leap over the natural boundary of Charles River and annex the fair cities on the north bank of that river. Boston must grow, and we hope to see her do so, ut it should be in the opposite direction. Let her absorb more of Norfolk, if need be, but not lay hands on Middlesex. We believe the suggestion of the Chronicle meets the case exactly. A city, large in sociations, might be erected by the consolidation of the three municipalities, rivals New York. The three possess every advantage requisite for a great and powerful city. With excellent water facilities she might offer advantages to commerce equal to any. With great railway advantages, she could move freight plenty of room she offers, and now gives, to manufacturers the double advantages works, and proximity to a market.

exation of these towns to Boston, Middlesex County loses a large amount of taxable property, and also loses a large amount of property the county would to be taxed to replace. Λ jail, court house, and county buildings would have to be erected, all of which ould involve great expense. Our county tax is none too small, and to have it arged to aggrandize Boston is asking could the legal business be transacted so the other side of the river for economical

A city erected from Charlestown, Cambridge and Somerville, would contain the largest territory under one municipal government in the State. It would unite conflicting interests, strengthen the business enterprise, and bring more commerce into Boston Bay than any other at once conservative and progressive. Said I, my friend, you must excuse
A task so hard for me,
How can I write on any theme
That will accepted be.
But going home I viewed the case,
And sat me down to write,
New thoughts came flying through my brain;
I caught some in their flight.
They came quite fast; to write them down.

the Central House.
On the 26th and 27th of June the 5th regiment assembled on Wyman's Plain in Woburn, for a battalion drill. Col. Rogers was in command. Six companies were present. They were all small in numbers, as the companies had been reduced, the minimum of a company in the U.S. Army being the maximum for a company in the Massachusetts voluntee militia. The whole battalion only numbered 104 guns, and of these the Phalanx carried twenty-one. A sudden and severe thunder storm marred the encamp ment at night somewhat, but next mo ng a very satisfactory drill was had. In the afternoon the battalion marched

Friday the regiment marched through town for a parade, and returned to their encam prevented by a thunder storm. Although small in numbers the encampment wa regarded as quite successful.

Capt. Thompson resigned in May, 1857, and the Phalanx was thereby left without any commissioned officers. Captain mpson, however, consented to comwhen they turned out with 50 guns. The command devolved upon Orderly Sergeant S. A. Grammer. The city of Charlestown having invited the Phalanx meeting was called for the choice of officers. The following officers were chos to command the company on that occasion: Capt. Timothy Winn, Lieuts, Grammer, Flanders, Clark, and A. F. Thompson. The Legislature of the previous winter had enacted a law providing for four lieutenants. The Phalanx turned out with sixty-nine men, and made a Reading, having been read out of the good appearance. A statue of General Warren was inaugurated on that day, and the celebration was one of unusual magnificence. The famous Seventh New was by Hon. Religious Amendment.

A National Convention to consider the bject of a religious amendment to the Constitution of the United States, met i Philadelphia on Wednesday, Jan. 18th, a 2 o'clock, P. M., and continued in sessio until Thursday night. Two hundred and nineteen delegates were in attendance, representing eleven states of the Union.

The object aimed at is such an amene ment to the Constitution of the Unite States as will adequately express the fac that this is a Christian Nation, and form Institutions, Usages and Laws.

ie Convention was influential and usiastic. Judge Wm. Strong, of the U. S. Supreme Court is the President of the National Association, formed to secure this object, and was expected to preside at the Convention, but his attendance was prevented by official duties. Ex-Governor James Pollock, of Pennsylva-nia, was chosen President of the Convenon. Addresses were delivered by Dr onathan Edwards, of Baltimore, and by Prof. J. H. McIlvaine, late of Princeto College. The following resolutions were Resolved, First. That this Convention of those who aim to secure a religious amendment to our National Constitution, gratefully acknowledges the good providence of God in the evident progress of this cause during the past year.

Second. That, with the conviction that under God all that is for its ultimate and early trimph is the publication and il-ulstration of the facts and principles upon which it is based, we pledge ourselves to renewed zeal in its prosecution.

Third. That this convention renewedly calls the attention of the American people to the fact, that in some of our treaties with foreign governments, which are of equal authority with the Constitution itself, we are declared to be a nation in no sense founded upon Christianity, and not (formally) unlike Mohammedans.

Fourth. That this Convention reiter.

principles of moral and political philosophy, which in substance have been set torth by former conventions, viz. That civil government in the carth stands for its right of existence upon the same basis with the family, both being the appointments of the God of nature and morality, and that nations, like families, are public persons with moral character, with rights, duties and responsibilities:

That the continued ignoring of God and religion exposes us to the guilt of formal national Atheism:

That the nation constituted by the union of the thirteen British-American Colonies was a Christian nation, as is shown by their several Colonial histories and their separate State Constitutions, and therefore it was and is no more than Anecdotes of Alexandre Dumas are buzzed about in the European jour-nals. Edmund Yates says one of the best he heard was told by Dumas him-self the last time he was iu England. After his son's great success with the "Dame aux Ca-"melias," Alexandre wrote to him as though from a stranger, congratulating him on the book, and expressing a desire to make the author's acquaintance. "I myself am a literary man," said he in conclusion, "and you may have heard my name as "the author of 'Monte Christo.' Dumas fils was equal to the occasion. He wrote immediately it's resply expression that the statement of the statement diately in reply, expressing the great pleasure he would have in making his on account of the high terms in which he had always heard his father speak of the author of "Monte Christo,"

LIFE INSURANCE.—The growth the business of life insurance, in this country, for the past ten years, is un-paralleled. During that period, the amount of insurance in all the American companies increased from one hundred and twenty millions of dollars to nearly two billions of dollars. It may safely be said that there are, at the lowest ca culation, 600,000 families concerned in the final payment of this large amount wpon an equal number of insured lives.

If we consider that there are, on an average, four persons to one family, we have about two and one-half millions of the population of the United States interested in the solvency and stabilty of the insti tution. This large number of insured is not taken from any particular class of the community, but from all classes although the two extremes of society, the rich and the poor, furnish comparatively few representatives. Taking one large Company as an example of the whole, the average amount of policies was ascer-tained to be July 1, 1870, $2929, showing that the largest class of insured lives wa taken from the middle class of society, o from among those who could, with co parative ease, manage an annual invest-ment of about $70. There were, at that date, one hundred and eight different amounts of insurance, varying from $20,000. For instance, there were 7500 policies of $1000 each: 6800 of $2000 each; 2990 of $3000 each; 4300 of $5000 each; 1500 of $10,000 each; and but 117 $20,000 each, the remainder being small numbers of intermediate amounts. These figures are unmistakable evidence of the value of life insurance to the general

A man named Southworth, living in lower East Tennessee, has just ejected from his stomach a frog which had been living there for fifteen years. Mr. Southworth has had a great deal of trouble with that frog. It used to begin to croak at the most unreasonable hours. When Southworth would go to church, for instance, the frog would remain quiet until scance, the frog would remain quiet until the congregation engaged in silent prayer, and then it would set up such a terrific howl that the sexton would rush in and collar Southworth, and drag him out to quiet down in the graveyard. Sometimes quiet down in the graveyard. Sometimes the frog would give a nocturnal serenade after Southworth was fast asleep in bed, and then Southworth would rise as mad as anything, and seize the stomach-pump and try to draw the frog up. But the subtle reptile had had that trick played on it too often during those fifteen years, and it always shinned up the tube a piece, out of the draught, and waited until Southworth exhausted himself. Southworth nev er fooled that frog a great deal. And when frogs were in season Southworth used to fish for this one with a fly; but it always refused to rise, and the fly buzzed around so in Southworth's alimentary canal that it nearly tickled Southworth to death Southworth had to wait until the other day, when the frog thought it would come up and go and see a friend; and, when it did come, Southworth killed it with a fork

BIDING OUR TIME.-It is hard work -learning to wait. A marked characteristic of human nature is impatience, and can be over-borne only by persistent willing and watchfulness. That "men are but children of a larger growth," is never more clearly proven than in the fact that what we work for we cannot patiently wait for. If it comes not soon, we get wearied, and fret ourselves for naught, because the fretting does not hasten it at all. Upon this subject some one has wisely advised:

Every man should wait—should bide his time. Not in listless idleness, not in G. N. CROCKETT, Reading, Market the above machines in this town, and useless pastime, not in querulous dejection, but in constant, steady, cheerful endeavors, always willing and fulfilling, and accomplishing his task, that when the occasion comes, he may be equal to the occasion. And if it never comes, what matters it to the world whether I or wrote such a book, so be it that the deed and the book were well done? It with the part of an indispersal to the part of an is the part of an indiscreet and troublesome ambition to care too much about fame—about what the world says of us, to be always looking into the faces of

The indebtedness of the club included $2700 to the proprietors of Dexter Park and $4000 to President

The municipal authorities of Boston appear to have one besetting sin-that of adorning themselves with costly badges at the city expense. It has been a strong point at election times for all parties to denounce such expenditures as useless and unjustifiable; but when the new Aldermen get in power the tempta-tion to decorate themselves seems too strong to be resisted.

The precaution of one listener in the concert room, Wednesday evening, is to be commended. A newspaper was spread upon the floor at his feet, upon which his tobacco expectorations were annexation, or as he very elegantly presses it, "our neighbor of the Wob Journal appears to be the first fish landed with the hook square in his gullet."

Now in regard to this point, although our necessities are not so urgent as those of the Advertiser were said to be a short time since, it would be very pleasant to have the sum paid to the Advertiser by the annexationists added to our cash re-ceipts, and our citizens would not object some generous party would furnish every house in town gratuitously with a copy of the Journal. But such is not the case; we have neither seen the "bait' nor, except as the Advertiser tells of it did we know that the County Commis sioners had gone fishing. However, i

We shall not lose sight of this matter, and will next week review the article of the Advertiser more fully. Charlestown always did want something more than she had got, and to form part of "Middlesex City" would doubtless gratify her urge this point because we wish to preserve Middlesex County intact, because the erection of "Middlesex City" is a desirable consummation.

CONCERT .- The concert of the Musical Association given in the vestry of the First Congregational Church last Monday evening was a decided success financially as well as musically. Th and fifty, and appeared to be highly entertained from the beginning to the close After a short introduction by the orchestra, the chorus, "Hail to thee, Liberty," was well rendered by the Association, followed by the quartette "Down by the sung by Misses Wood and Stearns, J. P. Barrett and Dr. Lang. Next came a duett by Misses Grammer and Stearns, entitled "Sunset," also, duett by Mr. Bancroft and Miss Wood, called "Will you sew my buttons on."

The Association gave the "Phantom Chorus," Mr. Barrett followed with a song about a "Dumb Wife," and next came the chorus, "Now by day's retiring light," which concluded the first part of the programme.

After an intermisson of ten minutes the second part was opened with an instrumental piece by the orchestra. The chorus "O, hall us, ye free," next followed, after which the quartette "Moonlight on the lake." A duett was sung by Misses Thompson and Stearns, called "Like the Lark." A violif duett by Kurck, with piano-forte accompaniment was given with fine effect. The vocal trio describing what they did "Over there," excited considerable merriment. The quartette, "Song of the Sea," was also given. The entertainment was brought to a close by the grand old chorus from the "Creation," "The marvellous work."

It was very promptly and finely rendered, carrying us back, in memory, to the Jubilee days.

Good sleighing is now the order f the day. The snow storms of Sunday and Tuesday gave a splendid foundation and the sleighs have been very happy ever since.

The sky was cloudy, threatening rain, and the streets were in a fearful condition; but despite these drawbacks thousands on thousands of the sons and daughters of Ireland, thronged the line of march of the procession hours before the time announced for it to move; their hats and bonnets decked with feathers, evergreen or ribbon, of the emerald hue.

It was my good fortune to view the procession from the balcony of Cooper Institute. If my memory serves me right it was very similar in make-up to the ordinary St. Patrick's Day celebration. The formal reception took place at Tammany Hall on the 14th inst., Hon. Richard O'Gorman making the welcoming speech, to which Gen. Thomas F. Burke responded in behalf of his associates.

After the procession filed down Third avenue, through the Bowery and Chatham street to the City Hall, where they passed in review before Mayor Hall and the members of the Common Council, thence up Broadway to the Worth Monument. At that point to the Worth Monument at the procession was reviewed by the existing the second from the upper stories of burning buildings when all other means of egress are to off, and even baggage and furniture can be sent quickly and safely to the ground. TREATMENT OF SCARLET FEVER .-Mr. Lennox, in a late communication upon the very prevalent epidemic o scarlet fever through England and Wales, calls attention to certain common wates, can attention to certain common sense views in regard to its treatment, which commend themselves to all thoughtful persons. He remarks that although we may not always be able to control the appearance of the disease, yet when it has been developed, its further progress is on should be entirely ther progress is or should be entire under our control, since it is a contagio disease, and, as such, capable of being antagonized. In this case, as in many other diseases, the poison is evidently propagated in the form of germs, what ever be their character, which, thrown into the air and falling upon or entering the body, give rise to renewed cases. In scarlet fever these germs appear to re tain their vitality for an unusual length of time, one case being mentioned where a piece of flannel, worn around the necl of a scarlet fever patient, was picked up and used two years after, and developed a fresh case of the disease. In a certain instance of an outbreak of scarlet fever over a wide neighborhood it was ascer-tained that in every instance this took place in families that had been supplied with milk by the same milkman. On in quiry it was found that persons connect with the farm from which milk was sup plied had been infected with scarlet feve to Mr. Lennox, after the disease had made its appearance, are, in the first place, to isolate the patient at whatever trouble or expense, preventing the approach of any one excepting the nurse and physician. With this, disinfectants must be used with the utmost freedom whether they be carbolic acid, perman-ganates of soda and potash, chloride o zinc, chloride of aluminum, chlorinated zinc, chloride of aluminum, chlorinated lime or soda, sulphate of iron, &c. These should be employed in and around the patient. All his discharges and excre-tions should be immediately disinfected, and all bed-clothing and linen worn by the patient treated with the same care. Nurses in attendance, and physicians touching the patient in any way, should also wash their hands in a disinfecting solution before leaving the room. en clothing that cannot be washed should be exposed to a heat of at least 212 degrees, this temperature having the prop erty of destroying the poisonous germs. Even after the putient has apparantly recovered, the precautions should be maintained until the peeling off of the cuticle, or the scales, has been entire accomplished, as in many cases the di ease has been traced to the particles of A CURE FOR ANGER .- One day 1 paid a visit to ope of my friends. On entering the dining-room, I saw two of her sons, of about seven or eight years old sitting each in a corner of the room.

They came forward to greet me, and I asked them why they were sitting so far apart. "Well," said one of them, "mamma" has said, that when we get angry with one another, we must not fight; but that we must sit down as far as possible from each other, until our anger is over."

He had scarcely finished these words when they both ran as fast as possible.

to sit down, each in his corner, looking 'Is not your anger over yet?'

"No!" they both shouted at onc I went in to my friend; and when after a quarter of an hour, I came back into the dining-room, I found the little brothers playing together.

"Is it over now?" I asked.

They answered, quite pleased, "You now it's over." What an excellent method to teach

SOMETHING TO BE THANKFUL FOR. A story of the courtship of John Brown, of Haddington, has been at last put into a book-but in my young days I heard it in the Lowlands of Scotland, and it is believed to be entirely true. This John Brown was the author of the "Marrow of Divinity," and other theological books, which are held in high esteem by the Scottish people. He courted a lady upwards of six years. He was so singularly modest and bashful that he had never ventured to kiss her. One d acquainted now for six years, an'-an' I've never got a kiss yet. D'ye think I may take one, my bonnie lass?" The reply was wonderfully characteristic of the Scottish maiden: "Jist as ye like, John," said she, "only be becomin' and proper wi' 'it," "Surely, Janet," said John, "we'll ask a blessin'." The blessing was asked, and the kiss exchanged.
"O, woman," said the enraptured but still devout minister, "O, woman, but it's TRUE HOSPITALITY.—Many a wife might read the following paragraph from Emerson, and be wiser therefor:—"O excellent wife! encumber not yourself and me to get a curiously rich dinner for this way. this man or woman who has alighted at our gate, nor a bed-chamber made at too great a cost. These things, if they are curious in them, they can get for a few shillings in any village; but rather let the stranger see, if he will, in your looks, accent and behavior, your heart and earnestness, your thought and will, that which he cannot buy at any price in the city, and for which he may well travel twenty miles, and dine sparingly and sleep little, to behold. Let not the emphasis of hospitality lie in bed and board; but let truth, and love, and honor, and to buy an Earth Closet, which is a substitute for the this man or woman who has alighted at Learning to Skate.

Young Mr. Slipup went down to the pond one evening to see the skaters, and poy and got the lad to put them on and give him a start.

on and placed his customer on his feet, Slipup said, in telling his experience, that it felt so nice to be on my feet that I guessed I would start out. I was disappointed in one particular. I thought it would require an effort to start off; but it didn't. While I was deciding between shooting across the pond like a comet, and marking out a spread-eagle in the very centre of the ice, a sudden movement of the left skate attracted my attention, and the next moment I was looking at the lamps through my legs and bumping my head furiously against the ice. This surprised me, and interested the boy. The more so, since I held in my out-stretched hand a portion of the hair that moment before adorned and protected his scalp.
"What on earth did you do that for?"

he asked, looking at me with considerable uneasiness, and holding his hands on his

I had created a sensation—besides my head ached.

He helped me up, but I noticed he didn't show the enthusiasm he brought to the first effort, and also, that when he got me to a perpendicular, he showed a disposition to avoid me.

"Are you looking?" I said with consultations of the real of six per cent per annual being subject to the same rales and regulations as a large round.

"Are you looking?" I said with confidence, not daring to turn round.

"O, yes," they both cried.

"Then here I go," I said. And the words were no sooner uttered than verified. I felt a sudden, rapid movement. I heard a rasping sound beneath me, and right ahead the lights gave a sudden whirl and disappeared, and the next moment I struck the ice a tremendous blow on the back of my head. I never had anything interest me like that, It had absorbed all my attention. I was confident nobody ever had such a fall.

Not even our first parents, nor the Not even our first parents, nor the Niagara river. It was worse than the last fall. This consoled me. I made no more inquiries for the young lady. My Old Man. Ah, well I know his brow is wrinkled,
Well I know his looks are gray—
Well I know his foets are gray—
Well I know his foet are passing
Swiftly down the sunset way;
And his manly strength and vigor,
Long ago have passed away,
But his heart beats just as warmly
Ah upon our welding day.
He is walking towards the river,
Whose dark tide no bridge may span
And the self same path I'm treading,
By the side of sny old man.

My old man is good and loving-My old man is tried and true; Side by side, in grief and gladness. We have walked life's pathway through My old man and I remember When we were not all alone; Many blossons we have cherished, But they faded one by one. One by one they crossed the river, Whose dark tide no bridge may span And we sit beside the hearthstone, Only me and my old man.

One by one our darling left us, Entered at the golden gate; We are waiting for the summon And we have not long to wait. My old man is nearer drawing-

Yah, Peter said he could, and so I sent him off for tools and materials, leaving the pig tied to a tree by one leg. My family gathered about the new-comer and viewed him with deep interest. He was a little fellow, but healthy, as was proved by the capacity of his lungs.

to live where you could go out and pick oysters for dinner, as you do apples? You need not smile; you could ea it, if you lived near an oyster farm. And it is about these curious farms that I want to tell you.

You must know that we eat so many oysters that they grew scarce in many places, and people began to fear that we should exhaust the supply. That would be a sad calamity to those who are very fond of oysters; so some enterprising men set themselves to work to cultivat oysters as we do potatoes-only in a diferent way. When the little oyster is launched into life, to take care of himself, All kinds of Mouldings, Cedar Chestrut and Locust his first care is to secure a home. His wants are very simple, requiring merel; a holding on place—for holding on is th speciality of an oyster. If he cannot at once secure a safe home, he is almost sure to be devoured by fishes, for fishes like oysters as well as men.

As soon as this fact about the young oyster was discovered by the wise men, they conceived the idea of providing homes for the little creatures, as men provide homes for poor children—only, as oysters don't care for cradles, and

-under water, of course-and between them were woven branches of trees. That was all. Having the nurseries ready, the men now brought several boat-loads of old oysters, and placed them on the ground around the stakes, to start the they naturally attach themselves to the branches, and proceed at once to grow. Each oyster is said to lay two millions of eggs in a season.

There are other ways of farming oys-One way, in use in Italy, where a lake is devoted to the purpose, is to build a small hill of stones, and make a sort of fence around it, with stakes driven into the ground. The old cysters live on the hill, and the young ones on the stakes. When the farmer wants cysters, he has only to pull up a stake, and pick them off. In France there is still a different way. The farms are enclosed in stone-walls, and large stones are scattered among the oysters, who live on the ground. Of course the baby oysters live on the stones. There are thousands of these farms on the shores of France. They have even gone so far as to improve the flavor of the common oyster by artificial feeding

A California Story

In the year 1852, I with three others were officers on the good steam-"Winfield Scott," then lying at the wharf in San Francisco, became as many others before us had, and have since been, with the pervading gold-fever since ocen, with the pervating gold-lever. Resigning our positions in the good ship, we started for the famous gold mines of "Carson's Creek." Our journey was accomplished on foot, we carrying our loads of provisions on our backs—the sun in the middle of the day terribly hot. The nights being cold, we would build a fire, and wranging our backs—the lakets around us nd wrapping our blankets around u ose ourselves to sleep, soon to wakened by the dismal bark of thousand cayotes, bears, and other "in-sects," that would quickly surround us Λ brand from the fire would cause them scamper off in a hurry, shaking the

Through the tangled underbrush he went, the tall

Awakening in the morning we saw the face of Jack peering through the door, and such a face we had never seen before. Scared was no name for it. The very life seemed frightened out of him.

"Foilers," said Jack, "has he gone?"

"Who?" we replied.

"Sin Jacquin"

"Well, yes, Jack; but what were you nning up the hill so for?"
"I was trying to catch the last one that caped," said Jack.

At this we could hold it no longer, and aughed till our sides ached. It finally aune to Jack's mind that he had been old, and knowing the lies we had detected him he, he raved like mad, and would ave considered it a personal layer if we street. Assume that the late ELI JONES, on Warren EFThe following anecdote is told of Caleb Cushing and Miss Hannah F. Gould, both residents of Newburyport, and addicted to little pleasantries on each other. The following "epithap" on Mr. Cushing was written by Miss Gould, of whom Me. C. had requested it.

| An interpretation of the content of the conten whom Mr. C. had requested it:

"Lie aside, all ye dead,
For in the next bed
Reposes the body of Cushing;
He has crowded his way
Through the world, they all say,
And even though dead will be pushing." To which Mr. Cushing neatly rejoin

To which Mr. Cushing neatly rejoined as follows:

"Here lies one whose wit.
Without wounding, could hit,
And green be the turn that's above her;
Having sent every bean
To the regions below,
She has gone down herself for a lover."
